SEYMOUR, Ind., March 31 .- To-night at 7:20 o'clock, several boys in passing along the public highway, about a quarter of a mile east of town, discovered the body os Charley Rockey, a farmer, lying in a fence corner with his face covered with blood. They attempted to arouse him, but could not succeed and came to town and gave the alarm. City Marshal Knox Wilson and a crowd went to the scene and brought the body to Dr. M. F. Gerrish's office, where it was found he had been hit over the head with some heavy instrument and that his nose was broken. Restoratives were applied and when Rockey gained consciousness he said that he had been struck by some unknown person while on his way to his home. His face and head are a mass of bruises, and he is suffering great pain. It is thought that the object of the attacking party was robbery, but Mr. Rockey says he had no money.

It Crosses the Line with More Marchers than Started from Massillon a Week Ago-In Camp at New Galilee.

NEW GALILEE, Pa., March 31. - The commonweal is camping to-night on Pennsylvania soil. The army crossed the State line at 10 o'clock this morning and arrived here at 2 p. m.

The day opened bright and breezy, and Camp Gompers, at New Palestine, O., was the scene of bustle and activity. Carl Browne slept in the headquarters tent in the straw for the first time, and personally saw to the getting ready of breakfast. There was a good deal more of alacrity and discipline noticeable in striking camp, due no doubt to Smith's cast-iron rules read out last night. Breakfast was satisfactory all around, and the march was begun at o'clock. There were 134 men in the ranks, a larger number than has started out yet from any one camp. The weather was good, the roads passable and the sun just warm enough to temper the wind. The townspeople turned out to see the soldiers depart, but were quite apathetic and made no demonstration. Everything was quiet in Pennsylvania was entered at 10 o'clock. Jaxon, the Indian, who went on ahead last night, left a greeting by the wayside, stuck in the twig of a sapling. Just before reaching the line the band wagon broke down. The army, immediately after passing the line, struck the worst bit of road it has encountered yet. The day was warm, and the men took off their overcoats and bundied them up. Carl Browne went to Darlington to telegraph to Coxey that ladies greeted them. Great enthusiasm prevailed among the officers when Ohio was left be-hind. Just at the line three men deserted seven recruits joined. The midday halt was made at Darlington under the shadow of the old house where John Brown went to school. This evoked considerable feeling in speeches made by the leaders. New Galllee was reached at 3 o'clock this

The army received a chilly reception by the few inhabitants of the little town of quarters in a dismantled foundry, and loafed and cooked in an adjoining lumber yard. No excitement was created and the town marshal said he could cope singlehanded with the army. Quite a number of people from New Lisbon came over in the evening to view the camp. Marshal Browne's orders contained something unusual. It was ordered that all nicknames be dropped, both by the men and reporters, that each man must draw soap from the commissary and use it. The under officers who ride have all secured new mounts and the army means to present a good appearance when Beaver Falls is entered. Fifteen new recruits came in on freight trains and took the badge. The camp presented a very lively appearance after supper and the men sang songs, the Chicago quartet having a good audience. Considerable provisions from Salem were brought in on a freight

Mr. Coxey arrived at 7 o'clock and immediately conferred with his marshals. The usual meeting was called, but as no audience appeared, was abandoned. The camp at Beaver Falls will be named Valley Forge. Four well-known crooks from Pittsburg, put in an appearance, but were sent out of town by the marshal.

THE SOUTHERN ARMY.

St. Louis Sending a Contingent to Pittsburg-Frey's Noble 600.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 31 .- The Southern branch of Coxey's army of the commonweal was busy organizing in St. Louis to-day and formulating plans as to transportation, etc., by which they hope to join the main body of the unemployed at Pittsburg. The start is to be made from East St. Louis to-morrow and the recruits will probably take the box car route, by which most of them reached this city. Captain Primrose, with about sixty men under his leadership, reached St. Louis yesterday. Since then some thirty men under the command of Lieutenants Mike Bryant and Mike Dunn, from San Antonio, Tex., have come in on an Iron Mountain freight train. Derby Doyle, at the head of some twelve men, all from Little Rock, arrived also during the day. All arrivals enlist under Captain Primrose's banner, and will try to reach Pittsburg as one band, where they will join the main body of the army. Altogether some six hundred recruits, many of whom will be the unemployed of this city, are expected to leave East St. Louis to-morrow. A dispatch from Longview, Tex., says:

The Frye division of the Coxey army arrived here to-day six hundred strong. packed like sardines in fourteen I. & G. box cars. They were so crowded none could lie down. They were met here by some two hundred citizens, all armed, who supervised the transfer of the crowd to the Texas & Pacific train. They are bound for St. Louis.

SCHEME OF MINERS.

They May March from One State to Another Inciting Men to Strike. PITTSBURG, Pa., March 31.-The coal miners of the Clearfield region are preparing for a movement like that of Coxey to induce miners in competing regions to join them in a demand or strike for higher wages. They propose to march in a body across the State to Maryland, and camp in the Cumberland and George creek regions until they succeed in inducing the miners there to join them. A meeting was held at Houtsdale to-day, and if the miners of adjoining districts indicate that they will be with the Houtsdale men in their demand, there will be a general strike declared. If a strike is ordered the union miners will organize an army and march to Maryland, gathering up the miners of Center, Huntingdon, Bedford and other counties on the way. They will hold meetings there and use all peaceable efforts to get the Maryland men to join them. A detachment of the army will be sent to Du-bois and the north to get the miners of that section to cease work.

A "General" in Trouble. DENVER, Col., March 31. - Joseph St Clair, alias Bert Hamilton, alias General Hamilton, commander of the Colorado division of Coxey's commonweal army, was arraigned in the justice court to-day, charged with stealing a suit of clothes and numerous other articles from Mrs. Ken-nedy, a boarding house keeper. Hamilton claimed the case was one of persecution because of unreciprocated affections, and asked for a continuance until Monday, which was granted. About forty of his follow rs were present when the case was called, one-half of whom city detective

Carberry declared had served terms in the Recruiting in Pennsylvania. HAZELTON, Pa., March 31.-The reorganization of Coxey's army was begun today by Daniel W. Sullivan, who styles himself "Colonel" Sullivan, and says he is commissioned to organize recruits in northeastern Pennsylvania to join Coxey at Frostburg. He had a conference to-day with W. Astor Evans, who abandoned the work here a week ago. Evans will not reenter the scheme, but Sullivan expresses himself as confident of securing a large following. A Hungarian named Marinki is also working in conjunction among the foreigners. No Police Interference. PITTSBURG, March 31 .- With the understanding that the entry of the army of the commonweal into Allegheny City will peaceful and orderly, "General" Coxey had the assurance from Director Murphy that there would be no police interference. Bookkeeper and $23,000 Missing. NEW YORK, March 31.-Gustave Hagan, one of the bookkeepers of the American Exchange National Bank, is missing, and so is $33,000 of the bank's money. One of the bank's customers, C. E. Bartolomew, is in Ludlow-street jail, charged with being accessory to the embezzlement, and the police are hunting for Hagan. The plan is said to have been for Hagan to faisify the books in Bartolomew's favor, and thus enable him to overdraw to the extent of leafy shrub, and carried off the other. Before starting for the nest, however, it hovered over the spot and made small circles round, then larger ones, as if taking the bearings. When it had got under way, even, it suddenly sped back and repeated these operations, as if upon reflection it did not feel sure that the place was quite fixed in its memeory. Returning empty in due time the wasp described but one circle, and flew like an arrow to the opening. But the leaf on which it had deposited its prey was obscured by another above, and the wasp, running in, soon lost itself among the foliage. It came out, circled round again, and descended—with a like result. Again and again this happened. Always it alighted in just the very same spot, after repeating its observations, buz-zing more and more angrily; at length, by chance it found the morself, flew straight away and did not return. As Belt says, a man seeking some object he had left behind would act in just the same way.

The leaf cutting ant is not one of those most conspicuous for intelligence, but he tells some striking stories. A tramway was opened near one of the nests, and many of them were killed in crossing the line After a few days they tunneled beneath the rail and thus escaped. The tram ceased to run for a while, and Belt filled up the tunnels, but never an ant would cross. They made new tunnels, and passed underneath. Instinct could not possibly tell Nicaraguan ants how to deal with a tram line. Belt opened a nest, compelling the occupants to take to flight. They removed all their precious stores of fungus, naturally, since mushrooms are not brought to bearing in a week nor a month, as human gardeners know too well. On the way to the spot chosen for a new nest there is a steep line. After a pause, the ents dropped their burdens, which rolled down; one-half returned for more, while the others trotted down the slope balls at its foot, and resumed theil march. Henceforward they were divided into two parties, one working to the brow of the incline and dropping the balls, the other taking charge of them at the bottom, until the storehouse had been cleared out. be cited. "Army ants" upon the march were stopped by a water course. A slender branch, the thickness of a goose quill, chanced to stretch across. If that tremendous multitude had crossed in single filethere was not room for two-hours would have been consumed; a number of them went on the bridge and clung tight to-

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., March 31 .- This city was practically in the hands of a violent mob of striking potters all evening. Mayor Morley and the city police were practically powerless to preserve order. Thousands of drunken and infuriated men were scouring the streets, attacking men who had gone to work. The riot started with an assault on N. T. Ashbaugh, chief packer at Knowles, Taylor & Knowles. James Rinehart and his wife were surrounded by a crowd of a thousand people for an hour, and the police were powerless to protect them. W. F. Gray and his wife were driven into the home of a friend and not allowed to come out. A traveling man and his wife were attacked on Sixth street by the mob and the lady fainted, while the husband was beaten into insensibility. man named Cook was violently beaten. Mayor Morley, in trying to quell the riot, was hit in the back with a brick.

Wonderful are the discoveries of science in these days, but we could cheerfully dispense with many of them. In particular, the growing mass of evidence which suggests that organic life is always accompanied by some degree of intelligence rouses the most uncomfortable thoughts, for intelligence implies a crowd of sensations from which, as we hoped, the lower order of animals were free. That ants and bees and such like have some power of brain might be admitted without unpleasant consequences. No one, in the temperate zone at least, wants to harm them unless provoked. But to hear that beetles and wasps, spiders and flies are suspected of feeling terror, pain, anxiety and such emotions is very disconcerting to the kindhearted. For they have always been treated as enemies of the human race, to be destroyed at sight. If the means of execution be cruel, that is seldom taken into account, and the very worst of it is that we must persevere in so treating them whether they be intelligent or no, for, after all, the most of them act in a manner hostile to our comfort, though their intentions Take wasps. The Bedouin Is a Naturalist and an The Bedouin is not an idealist. His idea of the beautiful consists in naturalistic description of the things around nim. This trait enables us to study the inner life of the sons of the desert through the writings of their poets. The Arab poet rearly always begins by speaking of himself. He praises his own virtues and belittles his enemy. Sometimes he sings the dords of some prince whose good will he would cb-

Then he proceeds to give a most vivid description of his lady, comparing her 'ace and figure with the trees, the flowers and the animals of the desert. The terms used by these Arabs would roll always be considered complimentary by Western ladies. The form of the poet's lady is generally compared to that of a palm of the desert or one of those sacred trees which the sons of the desert love to decorate with bits of ribbon and votive offerings to the lesser genil. Then he begins to draw upon the animal world for his comparisons, especially Antara, one of the piets, actually addresses his beloved with "O darling sheep," which need not sur rise us when we consider that the biblical name Rachel means ewe. When the camel which bears the lady away vanishes in the distance Antara sheds tears "like a bursting bottle." Her walk must be "like unto the walk of one who is drunk with wine' or like the walk of the quata bird, a species of prairie chicken. The Bedouin never praises a lady who has already become his. It would be Next to the lady of his desire comes, in the Bedouin's estimation, his camel, or rather his dromedary, but only the females are thought valuable. He compares the girl of his heart to the dromedary and the drom-edary to his girl. The fore feet of his favorite camel are to him "like unto the arms of his love." The song of his girl is "sweet as the bellowing of a camel calling its young." Cows do not stand much lower in his estimation. The chant of the houris in Paradise is compared with the lowing of milk kine calves. But the Arab of the desert is forced to depend entirely upon his camel. Its milk feeds him, it carries him wherever he wishes to go, its The Bedouins ride, invariably, females, because their pace is the easier. The males are used for heavy burdens. Generally, however, they are slaughtered early, as the sons of the desert cannot afford to waste milk upon animals which will not at some tilk in return. Misfor scribed by the poets as a camel which bears none but male young. The wife of the Bedouin flatters him by addressing him as "My darling camel, the one who bears and feeds me." Still the camel cannot take the place of the horse in every way, the camel never battle, likely to lie down at any time, signify-ing its disapproval of the turmoil. The horse is, therefore, the next to be praised by the Bedouin poet. It is often to be comOur Competitors Not In It holes, through which a string is passed to make it revolve. Earnings of Professional Forgers. Robert A. Pinkerton, in North American

A band of professional forgers before starting out always agree on a basis of division of all moneys obtained on their forgery paper. This division might be about as follows: For a presenter where the amount to be drawn does not exceed $2,000. 15 to 25 per cent.; but where the amount to be drawn is from $3,000 to $5,000 and upwards, the "presenter" receives from 35 to 45 per cent. The price is raised as the risk increases, and it is generally considered a greater risk to attempt to pass a check or graft of a large denomination than a smaller one. The middleman gets from 15 to 25 per cent. His work is more and his responsibility is greater, but the risk is less. There are plenty of middlemen to be had, but the "presenters" are scarce. The "shadow," when one accompanies the band, is sometimes paid a salary by the middleman and his expenses, but at other times he is allowed a small percentage, not to exceed 5 per cent., and his expenses, as with ordinary care his risk is very slight. The backer and forger get the balance, which
